

Women Safety Laws in India - RAG Reference Guide

This concise document is intended as a knowledge base for Retrieval-Augmented Generation (RAG) systems in educational or hackathon projects. It summarizes major legal provisions and emergency resources. It is not legal advice.

Emergency Numbers

112: National Emergency Response. 1091: Women Helpline (availability varies by state). 181: Women Helpline in many states. 1930: National Cyber Fraud Helpline. Contact the nearest police station for emergencies.

Stalking

Stalking is addressed under the Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita (BNS). Victims should preserve messages, screenshots, call logs, CCTV footage, and witness details before reporting.

Sexual Harassment

Sexual harassment includes unwelcome physical contact, sexually coloured remarks, demands for sexual favours, or other unwelcome conduct. Workplace complaints may be handled under the POSH Act through the Internal Committee.

Voyeurism and Privacy

Recording or sharing private images without consent may constitute a criminal offence. Preserve evidence and report promptly.

Cyber Safety

Do not share OTPs or passwords. Report fake profiles, blackmail, morphing, or cyberstalking. Save URLs, screenshots, chat logs, and transaction details if relevant.

Domestic Violence

Victims may seek protection orders, residence-related relief, monetary relief, and support under applicable law. Contact local authorities or support services if in immediate danger.

Filing a Complaint

Report incidents to the nearest police station or use emergency services. Provide available evidence, a clear timeline, names of witnesses if any, and location details.

Evidence Checklist

Keep screenshots, photos, videos, call recordings (where lawful), chat exports, timestamps, medical reports, and names of witnesses.

Immediate Safety Tips

If you feel unsafe: move to a crowded public place, contact trusted people, call emergency services, avoid isolated areas, and share your live location when appropriate.
